The British first came to India as traders. With the passage of time however they developed political ambitions. Following the decline and downfall of the Mughal empire during the eighteenth century, they began to work, through wars and diplomacy for the establishment of their political supremacy in the country. This turned out to be a gradual and prolonged process. Beginning with the British occupation of Bengal in the mid eighteenth century, it was completed nearly a century later with the annexation of the Punjab. Even as British were expanding their empire in India, isolated attempts were being made to challenge their authority. The climax came in 1857 when different sections of the Indian society combined in large parts of northern and central India in a bid to overthrow the British.

Unit—IV

4. (A) Read the following passage carefully and answer the questions given below : 5

I have a pet named Jimmy. About a month back it was a lean and feeble creature. It remained unaware of its main responsibility and sneaked out of the main gate to play in the street. But gradually, a sort of intelligence developed in it as it began to eat selective items. Now it does not go into the streets to move about. It does not take part in rooting around for bones and scraps like stray dogs. It likes to live inside the house. It has learned the art of safeguarding its master's house against the burglars. It daily goes out for an evening walk with me.
